D6: JP 2000-274923 A

Claims 1-21 relate to a refrigerator characterized in that a pair of clamps are installed for attaching a communication pad to a refrigerator door or a homebar door, and that if the communication pad is pushed in by a predetermined force, it is inserted between the pair of clamps.

D1 and D2 relate to a refrigerator characterized in that a display unit can be moved, by using an elastic member, to a withdrawal position which enables a user to take the display unit out with ease. D3 relates to a refrigerator having stationary means on which a monitor can station when a monitor device is detached from a main body. D4 relates to a locking method of key input of a refrigerator, characterized in that the lock of inputted data is set by setting a password for a control panel of the refrigerator. D5 relates to a refrigerator having a computer and a keyboard installed at a door thereof. D6 relates to a refrigerator having an LCD device for displaying various information.

1. Novelty and Inventive Step

According to claims 1-21 of the present application, a pair of clamps are installed for attaching a communication pad and supporting the communication pad in both directions, and consequently the communication pad can be stably attached to and easily detached from a refrigerator door. However, no technical feature for fixing a communication pad in both directions is disclosed in D1-D3. D4-D6 include a locking method of key input of a refrigerator and a technical feature for displaying various information of the refrigerator, but do not include any technical feature for attaching/detaching a communication pad.

Supplemental Box

In case the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient.

Continuation of:

Box V.

Therefore, the subject matter of claims 1-21 is considered to be novel under PCT Article 33(2).

A combination of said documents does not deny the inventive step for the subject matter of said claims. Therefore, the subject matter of said claims is also considered to involve an inventive step under PCT Article 33(3).

2. Industrial Applicability

Since claims 1-21 relate to a refrigerator having a communication pad attached to a door thereof, the subject matter of claims 1-21 is considered to be industrially applicable under PCT Article 33(4).
